March 31, 2020 - Our sling expert's opinion: Nothing is more physiological than a ring sling or mai tai to carry a newborn. So we recommend this one. Mothers who have been wearing babies in a sling for more than one time are familiar with the following situation: a child who at first could not lie still, soon gets used to the sling and, having mastered the basics of wearing a sling, begins to lie quietly in it, as if demonstrating: "I am already big and I can be independent." But after a while he becomes bored, and the child, if he does not have much interest in the world around him, begins to show anxiety, or even roll over and crawl in a sling.
