If you have any suggestions or input, I would be grateful. In addition to keeping track of tasks, i'd like to be able to also place information in a windows (or folder) with the task. It would have to be something like tags that a user could apply to a task. From there, other users could then sort by tags. It would also be nice to be able to set it up so that every time you open a window or task, it creates an "active task" for you to look at. The Japanese traditional food, Natto, is one of the richest sources of dietary fiber and lactic acid bacteria (LAB) among the many fermented foods. For the production of Natto powder, the procedure involves alcoholic fermentation and lactic acid bacteria cultivation at 45 °C. During these procedures, the lactic acid bacteria may use the distillery residues as carbon sources and produce lipases that produce a partially-dehydrated oil as a by-product. The objective of this work was to characterize the lipid fraction of the oil from the Natto bacterium. Four different lipid fractions, solid and liquid fractions, were analyzed by the most commonly used methodologies. Although the lipid fraction of the oil from the Japanese Natto bacterium had a lower melting point and lower viscosity than the widely used rapeseed oil, it was still a liquid oil.
