(Getty Images) Yahoo joins leading mobile carriers in testing new phones Yahoo has joined a group of mobile carriers in testing a new phone that will include its own apps, Yahoo said Monday. The new phone will be on sale in South Korea starting in October and will have Yahoo messenger, Yahoo Finance, Yahoo Sports and the Yahoo Japan service. The Yahoo developer who works on the new phone said he has been testing the phone with U.S. carriers for the past several months and that he expects to see a Yahoo-branded phone in the U.S. sometime in the third quarter. A spokeswoman for AT&T said Monday that the company has no information about when or if a Yahoo phone will be available in the U.S., but that the carrier will continue to offer two phones — a BlackBerry and a Samsung. Samsung has said it will introduce a new phone in the U.S. soon, and the new Yahoo phone is likely to be very similar to that device. The device is expected to be available at Verizon Wireless stores and Best Buy outlets. Yahoo said Monday it also has 10,000 employees working on making apps for Apple Inc.'s iPhone. The Yahoo phone will have a sliding menu on the bottom of the screen, while an internal Yahoo device will have a touch screen with swipes and fingers, such as the Windows Mobile-powered phone that the company sells in Japan. The new phone will also include a slider, a feature of the HTC Hero — a phone that is similar to the Droid. The Yahoo phone is probably the first of many devices that Yahoo will develop in the next few years, said the Yahoo developer. "This is one of the phones that is probably developed for the next two years, and (Yahoo) is hoping there are a lot of them," he said. The new phone will be in South Korea in October, when Yahoo will offer an exclusive feature for its Web service. South Korea
