enttec dmx usb pro grandma on pc usb interfaces How to tune old farts to watch movies for long time at home Are input meters with chokes (180 watts and less) safe for use with dmx lighting? The situation is i would like to install a DMX system and have the ability to control different lighting and position it from anywhere and from any device. Enttec on PC grandma on pc keyboard mouse This is a great video that demonstrates the power of the Enttec USB programmable interface from Enttec. Enttec USB interfaces are available for almost any PLC on a PC. How do you guys (pros) interface to enttec? To me it seems like any one of several cameras would work best when driving various lights, and playing commands back... I am looking for good PC-based USB Grandma hardware in the 500W-700W range and have done some searching, but most seem either to have no visible outputs or have outputs that are actually audio outputs. If the desired output is audio, can it be used with a PORTA or MAXA PLC? The Enttec USB interface is the only hardware DMX solution that is not based on the obsolete DMX512 standard (The "standard" people take such offense to!). In addition, The Enttec USB provides up to 7 channels of inputs and 7 channels of outputs, making it the perfect light controller for DMX-based systems. Unlike most DMX-based systems that are running the old DMX512 standard, the Enttec USB is compatible with GrandMA, the professional lighting software. I own an Enttec USB and a DJ Bus, an Enttec USB is much better than an DJ Bus. Can I feed the output from Enttec to my grandma laserdisc or laserdisc player?
