My problem is that when my program is running, the date fields are null, and I can't find a solution to what my issue is. I think it's the question, what value should I fill these fields with? So that the dates can pass to the web service and be stored? A: Webservice is expecting string datatype so you have to convert the date string you get from text box to string string datastring = textBox1.Text; here datastring will contain the string that you want to send to webservice. Now you can use method below to convert that string to date DateTime date = DateTime.Parse(datastring); So now you can call the webservice method like you are calling it normally and pass the parameter as parameter Web Service Method Call Example DateTime date = DateTime.Parse(textBox1.Text); Do something.... your webservice takes DateTime. Friday, October 26, 2005 The Well Snorted Little Pony I just finished watching THE BIG LEBOWSKI, which is one of those movies that may be a little old for a 14 year old and almost as old for most adults who aren't over 30. But it's rated R and well, I'm only 14, am I not? It was also a rather unexciting movie and after eating my humble pie I watched a few movies of a much lower quality that I recommend, and let me say you, I must have gotten really low standards after seeing that movie. At any rate, I watched IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE (1947) which is a really good movie. I've seen this
