Tarnished has an ongoing and exciting story that will keep you up at night. The Lands Between are a vast world that you will never get bored of exploring, and there are loads of exciting events to go to. • Tarnished Rivalry between the seven Elden Lords has been steadily escalating with the invasion of the enemy within, and the current situation is full of danger. Players have to catch up with the latest situation. *What is the Elden Ring? - An ongoing revolution and a megastructure that connects all seven Lands Between in the Lands Between. - The governing body in the Lands Between, it establishes order in each land, and controls them. It controls the administration, politics, and economics of the Lands Between. - The amount of power held by the Elden Ring is enormous. Its influence extends to the four continents, the rest of the known worlds and even the other universes. - Characters in other universes can survive on the same plane as you in the Lands Between, and can transform according to their kind. An adult human can transform into a cat, and can even become a dragon. - There is also a group of characters that have been waiting for you to show up. These powerful beings called Martians are able to bond with you. - To enter the Lands Between, you must defeat the demon boss that is established in each land. - An Elden Lord is a war hero who has displayed extraordinary courage. In the Lands Between, they rule the four continents and force other Elden Lords to obey their orders. • The Lands Between and Region Map - Each region in the Lands Between is a large and densely designed world. - In each world, you can find one or more large or small dungeons. The tiles that make up each world are connected, allowing you to travel freely between the different areas. - Around the large dungeons, you can find a variety of items and other things. - A world in which different dimensions are linked, allowing you to move freely between the worlds • The World of the Seventh and the Characters to be Fought - Castlevania and Monster Hunter are the closest to Tarnished. However, it is not an online game but a game that will take place in the same world. - In Castlevania, there is a weak demon called "Arana," who plans to create a copy of the world and enslave the inhabitants. The Witches and Belmonts will travel together

It looks like a stealth-action, diary-shooter, simulation RPG with a mystifying story. For those of you who don't know, it's a game that hides its real genre within realism. So, this VN/RPG is not a typical game where you choose a character, fight against enemies, turn back time and return to the city etc. This game combines the elements of real-time strategy and game-playing systems to create the most awkward of merging genres.

In this open-ended RPG, you play as a high-schooler, and a plot develops according to how you progress through the game. The main character "Seed" is an actor, but the script gives him a completely different role as an age-beyond-his-years young man who unites the people of Lost Hamm, serving as a figurehead. As Seed, you are preparing to take on the role as a leader, and strive for the truth in the tumultuous world of Lost Hamm.

Seed's Vision

Seed's Legend will be the newest rom-com in the rom-com world. As a very pure and honest young man who does not

The most striking thing about the game is that it's a completely new take on the RPG genre. It might be a fantasy genre, but it's done up in a way that doesn't imply that genre clichéd fantasy setup. The game is about real-life drama and a story that is to be told, the graphics are a bit inferior to other games in its genre, but the story and its set up is what it needs. The graphics aren't bad and are overall good in a sort of low-end type of way. This is a title that an aspiring RPG player should check out. "Fantasy Fantasy genre action RPG! Q: Is it possible to manipulate the font-family property using jQuery? I'm not quite sure I'm phrasing this correctly, so the solution may be over-generalized. What I would like to do is change the text inside of my page's heading tags to be, say, a bold tag. I know I can do it with something like the jQuery below, but I'm wondering if there's a clever way to do it without just pulling the heading and applying a string replacement for the text inside:

My Name

$('#Name').text('Hello World!'); With very little effort, I could define an external function to do this: function changeHeading(tagId) { $(tagId).text('Hello World!'); } This seems like a very simple enough task, but I'm sure if I was asking Google (or SO) this question, I'd find something that already does this. The only way I can imagine someone coming up with a single function that does this would be to manually find the h1 tag, treat it like an object and modify its contents. This seems like an incredibly error-prone way to handle something that is a pure syntactical construct: $("h1").text("Bold string!"); ...or... $("h1").css('color','red'); In short, I'm a bit lost as to why I haven't stumbled across a "filter" (no pun intended) like this already. I'd like to know if there's a way to filter DOM elements instead of modifying the markup. Also, if this is simply a "no" proposition, is there a good reason for it? A: Wouldn't the simple solution be to use classes instead of IDs?

My Name

Then you can do $('h1.name').text("Bold string!"); A: Declare a function like this function toggleH(el) { if (el.getStyle('font-family') == 'lucida grande') el.setAttribute('style', ' '}

Q: How do you calculate the distance between two points in 3d in Blender There is a way to do this in Blender. If you zoom in close enough to a 3d model, you can click through surfaces and end up in a 3d space that doesn't have any bones or anything. How can you calculate the distance from one point to another, in this 3d model? A: Position A to somewhere you know about by using the grid, ctr + a Position B to somewhere you know about by using the grid, ctr + b Connect A to B using the bridge edge, ctr + e After doing this, the "Calc Distance" option should be available from the side panel.

Political Ads Get Mixed in TV Culture War Content Tools The communications industry and congressional government watchdogs have been taking a wait-and-see attitude toward a proposed Federal Communications Commission regulation giving TV stations five extra days to run political ads that aren't paid for by electioneering groups. The one-year requirement, established in a proposed regulation that the FCC adopted a year ago, would result in fewer ads by organizations such as Karl Rove's American Crossroads network, according to some critics. It would also make it harder for organized labor to target advertising for political candidates with commercials that don't explicitly mention a candidate, such as a pro-workers ad that portrays members of the restaurant industry as villains. In contrast, some unions buy time to promote a politician but tag the spots as issue ads, making them legal in states such as California that don't regulate such political spending. However, agency sources told The Cable that the agency's commissioners have only considered adopting the rule recently and haven't decided whether to go ahead with it. A spokeswoman for FCC Chairman Kevin Martin said the agency hadn't taken a position on the proposal. "Not yet, but we will soon," said the spokeswoman, Melissa Matheson. The measure, included in an agenda document posted online on March 9, is not yet final. An additional document posted in February lists the names of a dozen industry groups, including the National Association of Broadcasters, that have objected to it. But the rule, which must be adopted by the current commission, could form a centerpiece of the FCC's efforts to deal with political advertising
