This comes about a week after his blistering convention performance, where he was guest-edited and introduced many of the Party's main themes. This tactic of promoting the "establishment" candidates to steer the convention has caused some frustration with fans and Cruz skeptics. There's a belief that the GOP's remaining establishment wing is exhausted from a years-long "culture war". Cruz is looking to change this by co-opting nearly 20% of the delegates and not just on the first ballot, but on subsequent ballots. He also reportedly wants a floor fight in Cleveland. Both of these things would, at least temporarily, give the illusion that the Cruz-Trump fight is still alive. Quid Pro Quo This new strategy is called "quid pro quo". Q: Ionic 2 | horizontal form directives with ngModel I'm working on a Ionic 2 app (for the first time). I have a scenario where I need to conditionally show a form directive. I can't really use Angular forms then. The Directive looks like this: @Directive({ selector: '[myFormName]' }) export class

FormComponentDirective { @Input() myFormName: string; This works fine, but I have multiple of this on my page. Since I don't want to repeat myself, I would like to do this with a scope aware property. So I have created the property like so: @Input() myFormName: string; @Input() myFormName2: string; @Input() myFormName3: string; and so on.. When I do this, the name of the myFormName property changes to myFormName1, and so on.. And if this is set again, it changes to myFormName01, and so on. Now I want to use this property for my HTML, so I can do something like this: What is the correct way to do this? Thanks in advance!

A: Since I was mainly solving this on my own, I was not aware of a simple solution on ionic's own docs. Details for @Directive({selector: '[myFormName]' is explained here. And the solution is pretty straight forward: Hope that helps future people as well!

Q: Remove multiple words when a webform is submitted I've got a webform that have an expiry date. I'm trying to pull these values from the form.

$dow={$row->date_expiry[format_date($

Discounting is a method used in economics where an item is considered more valuable in a future period than it is now. For example, if an investor is debating whether or not to make a future investment in a commodity, they may value the commodity in the future because they will be able to sell the commodity at a higher price. This means that they will be able to get more money for the commodity if they wait longer. This idea is also used in saving. For example, if you have $100 now and your goal is to save $1000 in 10 years, then $$1000/$100 = 10$, which means that it would take 10 years for you to save the $1000 you want. If you want to save in one year, you would have to save $$1000/$100 = 10.0$, or you would have to save $1000 in 10 years, 10 x 10 or 100 times. Now, you have to decide whether you are willing to wait until you are 11 years old to save the $1000, and you will only get to be 11 years old in 10 years. You will then be able to save the $1000. Thus, if you go by the rule above, if you want to save the $1000 in one year, you will have to save $1000/100 or $10,000 in 10 years, or $100 in one year and $10000 in 10 years, or $100 now and $100 10 years from now. If you didn't want to wait until you were 11 to save the $1000, then if you decide that you want to save the $1000 now, you would have to save $1000 x the value of $1 now, which is $1000. Note: 1 dollar can equal 1, 10 dollars can equal 1,000 dollars, or 100 dollars. It does not equal 1,000,000 dollars. If you went by the rule above and you saved $1000 now, and another $1000 in one year and wanted to save the $1000 you saved, you would have to save $$1000 + $1000 = $2000$ now, because you would only be 10 years old in one year. Then, you would have to save $$2000 \times \100 (now) which is $2000, because you
