remediating and restoring original factory-applied automotive finishes is a very specialized job. An auto shop must have the experience and specialized knowledge to effectively do any repair to a finish. This is a job requiring both skill and the knowledge of certain materials. Carwraps, although a great concept, can only offer a temporary solution to your coating issues. When used on the top of the paint, it will not have the adhesive properties to keep a truly effective coating from lifting off. Many times, the plastic wrap will simply pull the paint off the original surface and create a barrier that will eventually cause damage to the paint. Our company is often called upon to clean and restore finishes to cars that have no other options but to have the paint stripped and resprayed. We have an experienced team that can handle all aspects of your restoration needs, from a coat or two of clear coat to the stripping process. We can do a total paint restoration or a partial strip using various approaches. Whether it is the clear coat, duplex (two layers of paint) or paint only, we can do it. Once you've had your car repaired and painted, it's important to get it back to its original factory condition. That's why we offer our Multi-state paint reconditioning services. Our spray painters have successfully stripped paint from over 800 cars on a very short notice. With our on-site spray booth, we can take the wraps off and have your finish ready in no time

The Electric Motor. The penultimate game of the 2014 season doesn't have nearly as much bearing on who the Minnesota Vikings will draft next month as many fans will want you to believe. Still, it does serve as a reminder of the potential that could be realized if this team really turns things around. The Vikings still have an excellent shot at a postseason berth, but you have to wonder if the home stretch will be all about promoting a product that fans are already starting to lose interest in. The Vikings boast the fourth-rated offense and sixth-rated defense in the NFL and they're thriving even without a healthy Adrian Peterson in the backfield. If they're to secure a playoff position, they'll need improvement from a unit that, while solid, has shown little to no signs of being able to move the ball consistently. Quarterback Christian Ponder has shown flashes of becoming a top-tier QB 0cc13bf012
