Rise of the Machines is a competitive multiplayer fantasy card game. To play, two teams of three take on each other on a field of randomly generated cards. Each card represents a unique weapon, armour or item the team can acquire. You can add cards in your deck by crafting them. Crafting a card involves playing cards on the bottom row and moving their value up towards a specific value. Some cards in your deck are mandatory, such as Champion Level cards. Halloween 1948 Halloween 1948 is a 1982 horror film directed by Paul Morrissey. Plot America is dark, cold, and full of gangsters after the war. Teenage Billy Wainwright is ridiculed by schoolmates Tony Donaldson and Eddie McGuire for being unprepared for the world after the war. His sister, Vivian, has returned from France and is cold and distant. They move to the mountains to live in a lakefront house with Billy's uncle Joe and his friend Sam. Nearby is Joe's old friend Tony Foley, the acting Sheriff, and his love interest, the owner of the empty, rundown Hotel White Spruce. Foley takes Billy camping. While

Foley protects Billy from alcohol, Vivian fills him in about her wartime experiences, including violent revenge against a Nazi general. During a bath she sees the visage of the general holding a crucifix. Vivian has a bad sense, like her mother, about bad men. Billy and his friends are accosted by the Starrs (known to locals as the "Cadets") gang. On Halloween night, Billy loses his virginity to the cadet Zena, and the gang follow him to the lake to avenge Zena's razor-fingered lover, the Cadet Fartley. Billy, Eddie, and their new friend Butch are locked in a boathouse while their friends search for Zena's body. As they tunnel out of the boathouse, Butch and Eddie are murdered, probably by the cadets, as Eddie witnesses a dead cadet. The effort to find Zena's body turns into a bloodbath as the gang murders everyone who knows of Billy's presence. The Cadets pursue Billy and Vivian, who hides in the police station as Bobby joins
