Available for purchase on all platforms - PC, Xbox and PS4 - Train Simulator will soon be getting RhB powered! About This Content Winding through the beautiful Alpine Inn valley, the Engadin Linie from Rivet Games features the 57 km Swiss meter-gauge railway from Pontresina to Scuol-Tarasp. Built as the first RhB line to be electrified with single phase alternating current, the metric-gauge line was opened in 1913 to the public - and is now waiting for you to discover it in Train Simulator! RhB started construction of the core Engadin Linie from Bever to Scuol-Tarasp in 1903, taking nearly 10 years to finish the route, because the long tunnels between Guarda and Scuol presented the miners with unexpected challenges. It was the first RhB route to be electrified right from the beginning - and also the test route for the new single-phase alternating current while the route was under construction. The Engadin (literally "Valley of the Inn people") line leads North East through the beautiful regions of Upper and Lower Engadin following the Inn River. The first section comprises the Samedan to Pontresina railway which was built as a link between the Albula and the Bernina lines. It follows the wide valleys around Samedan, before climbing steep hills in the narrow valleys between Cinuos-chel-Brail and the endpoint at Scuol-Tarasp. Included in the route is the iconic RhB GE 6/6 II locomotive in its typical red livery, with which you'll be challenged in a range of scenarios. Also included are two EW4 passenger coaches, baggage coach, and 2 freight cars with different loadings. With its iconic stations and infrastructure buildings along a stunningly beautiful route, the Engadin Linie is always worth a visit. Climb on board the RhB GE 6/6 II locomotive and start serving the 17 stations along the Engadin Linie, waiting for you to master them all! Included Scenarios A total of 7 engaging Career scenarios are included, including a tutorial for the GE 6/6 II, as well as 3 Railfan Mode scenarios: [GE 6/6 II RhB] Autumn Westbound [GE 6/6 II RhB] Landquart to Scuol-Tarasp Freight [GE 6/6 II RhB] Locom

Rock Paper Shotgun Don't Just Stand There, Get Into It! PC Gamer Its three lanes and ten four-story buildings that make for a good game. But for all its high-adrenaline, high-fantasy presentation, Steel Armor is surprisingly simple. Moby Games Has two-lane maps, with three towers, to give you three ways to play! These focus on the "dueling assassin" style, with a lot of turn-based maneuvering. Official Site The game has very good controls, with the weapons satisfyingly responsive. Official Site The AI does a good job of managing its units and no resource management becomes tedious or time consuming. Official Site The game has many weapons with varying ammo types and fire modes. It is realistic weapon such as the "pulse" that pours a strafing stream of bullets in a circular pattern over the target, and "spray" that spits bullets at the target. Official Site It has a user friendly interface. You can move the map with the mouse, send troops with the keyboard or automatically have them fall into battle with the "Empire Storm" ability (Empire Storm is a Empire faction unit command that functions in a similar way to capturing flags in Starcraft. You must send a number of Empire Storm units at your enemy to push them out of a map, and then choose to sit out a capture round to make your opponent end up with these units). Official Site Clans come in to play with the "Land Summons" ability. They can summon any number of their own units, and these reinforcements can arrive at any time to even the fight. When a unit is summoned, it spawns on the map, (under the control of the unit that summoned it) and is then moved to where it is needed. Official Site The game has a very simple APM stat system, you can only have 1 action per turn so you need to plan ahead. Official Site The units and buildings are designed to be memorable. The "freelance ranger" is a ranged unit that tosses rocks at enemies (with the explosive version being a bomb, a building, the largest unit) and the "bomb dog" that hunts for bombs and throws them. Official Site The game has a dedicated mobile version, but you can play the full game on the PC and Mac, but on the Mac the game can be played in window mode. Official Site Two years

The choice of the petal throne, or the structure of the balcony, is the most significant little job in the dome. It is not a problem to rig up the balcony so that the legs clear the support poles. As long as the balcony is attached to the concrete walls, it's a cinch to make the attachment secure. But if you have to use the concrete from the interior or exterior walls, you have to do something about making the legs and beams accept the load above, and secure the load below. The strongest way to accomplish this is to use a beam arrangement like this. The concrete supports, with corrosion resistant anchor bolts, are free standing in the supports. The others are spread out in the horizontal beams below. Concrete is stronger than bronze, but not much, so it's not absolute necessary. The ends of the beams are overlapped half way and are made of three 6" (75mm) flat bars spread at 5:12.5. With added reinforcement, this can support up to a 160 lb. load above and a weight of 120 lb. below. This also provides the most strength and flexibility, because the leg simply slides up and down the horizontal member. As long as your connectors are on good metal, with good lash joints, they shouldn't break. If you can't make the support spread halfway, then you may need steel or bronze reinforcing in the middle of the span. This is done with rebar inside the sleeve that is inserted. The tubes of the leg have 5 1/2" (140mm) interior diameters. You need to cut and clean the vertical legs to about 4" (100mm) above the base. If you use 5/8" (16mm) thick or thicker, they may pull out of the concrete slightly. Adding 10,000 psi (6.9MPa) of tension on the anchorage will prevent this. Do a careful checking to see if you need a very gradual change in the supporting width. If there is no heavy load on the supporting beam, any spread design can work well. Otherwise you would need a good, much sturdier design. To make the beam get square, you can use a footer, prop, or back plate to stabilize it. Here are some examples of load and spread: Here is a steel leg supporting a 60 lb
