In other words: No investigation has been ongoing. No investigation of JC Staff was undertaken. No investigation of JC Staff was reported. But the key issue is the use of the very general word 'any' in the question, and the 'any current or former staff' tag on the end. In other words: Do you mean anyone that staff have investigated? Do you mean anyone that anyone has investigated? Do you mean any current or former

After Stannis released Davos and Melisandre to escort Brienne of Tarth to Castle Black, his forces reached Kingsroad crossing Brienne of Tarth and Jon Snow. There should have been some opportunity to ambush the main army but there was none. Why didn't Stannis choose a different route? A: Why did Stannis' army choose to march to Brienne of Tarth and not somewhere else? Because they didn't have a choice. Stannis and his army are facing an invasion in multiple directions. They are still in dire need of food and fighting the war at sea will do nothing to stop the invasion, but the coast is so close that Stannis and his forces don't have the time and energy to push out northwards and engage the enemy. There was no other choice. The whole point of marching on the Kingsroad and burning the boats was to focus on the North and keep (what the warring side think to be) Robb Stark and his vassals at a distance from the East and the rest of the war, because the vassals could bring fleets to the aid of the Northern forces. A good example of this was the Battle of the Blackwater, where the Lannister army was able to march around the Blackwater Rush to trap the Stark forces, but they couldn't do the same with the Vale because the pass would be too close to Winterfell to be attacked. 1.
