Here are some footnotes of Morley Minto Reforms in Urdu and Persian with Notions of Nostalgia and Spirit of freedom:.. The Indian Councils Act 1909, also known as Minto-Morley Reforms, is the second major act of the Minto Reforms (1909-11), a series of reforms introduced during 1909-11 by the Liberal government of British India. The Act was passed in the Imperial Legislative Council on 29 May 1909. __a. __: Morley-Minto Reforms in Urdu and Persian with Notions of Nostalgia and Spirit of freedom. As part of the Morley-Minto Reforms, the indigenous legislature in India was enhanced and the provincial governments in the un-coloured provinces (presently renamed as provinces and not state) were given the power to set taxation apart from the central government. Likewise, the Imperial Legislative Council was given a greater role in its selection of Indian members and in the appointment of government departments. These reforms also gave the provincial legislatures the power to elect a legislative council (a house of the provincial legislature) at a prescribed ratio with the President of India; to establish a judicial system; to police the un-coloured areas; and to impose local taxes.
