Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a light emitting diode (LED) array device and to a light guide member and a light-emitting device using the same. More particularly, the present invention relates to a light guide member which is usable as a light-guide portion of an illuminating device, such as a light-emitting diode (LED) array, and a light-emitting device using the same. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, the application of light-emitting diode (LED) arrays has been expanded to various fields such as automobile, building, lighting, display, and the like, and the development of flat display devices capable of displaying information in an improved display quality is actively being carried out. Flat display devices include a display device using an inorganic electroluminescence (EL) element, for example, an organic EL (organic EL) display, a liquid crystal display (LCD), a plasma display (PDP), an organic light-emitting diode (OLED), a field emission display (FED), a vacuum fluorescent display (VFD), and the like. In general, a light emitting device, such as an LED array, is configured to have a plurality of light emitting elements, such as LEDs, arranged in an array form. Because such an LED array is generally used as a backlight for a portable display device, it is desirable that the LED array is thin. In order to provide a thin structure, it is necessary to reduce the number of light emitting elements arranged in a unit area. However, when the number of light emitting elements arranged in a unit area is reduced, the brightness of light emitted from each light emitting element is reduced. To solve the above problem, a light emitting diode array device (LED array device) using a technique of relaying light is disclosed. That is, the light-emitting device uses a light emitting diode as a light-emitting element, and a light-emitting diode array using a light-
