News Corp.(Sydney:ASX) reported on the disruption in its results as a consequence. AAPL analysts are urging shareholders to take a wait-and-see attitude and focus instead on changes in the device, including the claim that it is the 'world's first smartphone with wireless charging built in'. And while the announcement was overshadowed in the news of the day by the release of new Samsung devices, it would appear from the reaction of the market that Apple is once again ahead in the market. News Corp.(Sydney:ASX) is the leading provider of early information and news to Australia's top companies. National and city editions of The Australian Daily and The Australian Financial Review are available to subscribers as a rolling service at all kiosks in regional, metro, city and national suburbs. Read more at The Australian Daily.One of Facebook's earliest algorithmic products, "People You May Know" still manages to give us a small ripple of excitement. The feature is also one of the least understood components of the social network's business model. People You May Know (or PYMK) is both a feature and a product. It's a product because Facebook has begun selling it. It's a feature because it's a core part of how Facebook operates, it's freely given to people who sign up for the service and it probably drives a significant fraction of Facebook's ad business. Unlike the rest of the service, it's not new. Facebook introduced the feature around the same time it introduced Facebook Lite, and the company has been "testing" PYMK intermittently for a while, according to a e79caf774b
