According to a recent article published by the Huffington Post, the Milwaukee Brewers want to trade third base prospect Scooter Gennett. Gennett would likely be a good fit to Milwaukee given the team's aggressive stance this offseason, although they need a third baseman. That being said, here are two possible trade targets the Brewers could pursue for Gennett: 1. The Texas Rangers The Rangers are more or less set for the moment with Adrian Beltre at third base and Mitch Moreland hitting third with Josh Hamilton in left. They are unlikely to trade for third base despite their obvious need given the fact that they can move Moreland to left field and keep Beltre as the DH. Mike Napoli appears to be their only trade piece, and he is not a very attractive trade for Milwaukee at this point. I think the Rangers would be a good fit for Gennett. Texas is loaded with good young players. Jurickson Profar is the crown jewel of this system along with Kaleb Cowart and Taylor Jones. This is the team that has a lot of depth and is made up of many pitchers. The Brewers do not have any pitchers that would intrigue the Rangers, and the Rangers are looking to add a bat to their lineup. Gennett would be an upgrade over the middle infielders currently on the roster. This team has a lot of good defense and it would help take some of the pressure off Ryan Braun and company. More importantly, it would make sense for Prince Fielder to play in front of a young group of infielders with Profar and Jones playing at third base. The Rangers need a 3B, and Gennett fits their needs. The trade would be a little surprising, but with the way the Brewers have rebuilt the team, it is not unlikely. It would be smart for the Brewers to wait until
