Biography The son of Stephen Kingsley, he was born in Dawlish, Devon, in 1780. He was educated at St John's College, Cambridge. He was curate of Wollaston, Cambridgeshire, in 1811, and of Swaffham Prior, Cambridgeshire, in 1813. In 1818, he was appointed rector of St Mary's, Cambridge. He died in Cambridge, on 24 August 1846, aged 65. Kingsley has been called the John Selden of the 19th century. His biblical learning was immense. He became a Professor of Theology at Cambridge, and subsequently was appointed Archdeacon of Huntingdon, a bishop's temporary residence. He was well known, and although not before his time, was long suspected of being a kind of Muggletonian. He was a keenly interested in the Catechism League of Huntingdon, and warmly espoused the cause of voluntaryism, though he did not put it forth in a polemic form.
