By accomplishing this task, the hero becomes connected to the Velvet Room. With a series of small decisions to make, the player must eventually accept the call to save a world they have never seen before, and begin the game in a world unlike any they have experienced.

What's new:

is a puzzle game developed by Wowwee that has some similarities to Tetris. It was released on a single screen, sliding puzzle called the Cube in August, 2003, available for purchase through its website and its retail stores. The release was a commercial success, and was followed by an official sequel game, The Alien Cube Part 2: Stargazer Edition, released in 2006. In 2006, as its popularity started to wane, Wowwee Group enlisted to add an official word puzzle counterpart to the game called AlienWord, which came with a $5,000 prize for the first person to solve it in a time of 35 minutes. This variation of the game was much less successful; the time to finish the challenge was reduced to 20 minutes, and the content was changed to a grid of puzzles, instead of a single, sliding puzzle. Wowwee also made a second, partner puzzle game, Alien3D, released only on iPods. The Alien Cube was a demo for Tetris Creator, released only on Dreamcast. This puzzle game is similar to The Alien Cube, but it was released for a wide variety of platforms, and is not a puzzle game itself. It includes a self-destruct mechanism that turns the player's cell blocks into colored blobs if they move too fast. Wowwee Group created The Alien Cube as a tie-in to the first Star Trek movie from Paramount Pictures, released in May, 2002, and featured characters from its film, which were based in the universes of Star Trek: The Next Generation. It featured characters from the Q continuum inspired by characters from the original Star Trek, Star Trek: The Motion Picture, and Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan. The game, which was an eleventh-hour addition to the promotion, was originally a puzzle called Cube, but was retooled and released as The Alien Cube.[1] The game concept was created by director of business development Matt Aaron.[2]Q: Alternative to selecting type which is stored in external file I have a composite data type which contains a common part and an 'extractor' part.
