CH₃NH₃PbCl₃ nanosheet: a novel high-performance transparent conductive oxide semiconductor. In this contribution, we report the successful preparation of CH₃NH₃PbCl₃ nanosheet as a new high-performance transparent conductive oxide semiconductor with the morphologies of 2D nanosheets. The resultant CH₃NH₃PbCl₃ nanosheet exhibits higher transparency and lower sheet resistance than that of well-known PEDOT:PSS, and is even much higher than that of ITO.

Mortality after breast biopsy: an observational cohort study. While there are guidelines for performing diagnostic mammography, no guidelines exist for biopsy. Knowledge about the risk of death after biopsy is limited. To document mortality after biopsy. In this observational cohort study, patients aged 50-85 years were identified in the period 2003-2013 from the Netherlands Cancer Registry. We performed a medical record search to determine the reasons for undergoing breast biopsy in cases of malignant or suspicious lesions found on mammography or screening. We identified 11,535 women of whom 8,112 underwent breast biopsy, 5,928 for malignant lesions and 2,484 for suspicious lesions. There were 39 deaths after biopsy (10 malignant and 29 suspicious). During 18,497 person-years, the observed mortality was 0.35%. The estimated proportion of women at risk was 3.2%. A woman's risk was dependent on age (hazard ratio (HR) 2.0 (95% confidence interval (CI) 1.4-2.8) for age 80-85 years). Relative to a benign or probably benign lesion, the HR for malignant lesions was 22.1 (95% CI 10.8-46.7). After adjustment for age, the HR was 2.0 (95% CI 1.4-3.0). We found an excess of deaths after biopsy with relative risks ranging from 2.1 to 4.2. These findings support the need for biopsy when lesions are suspicious.

THE GREATEST MARTYRS Augustine must have considered himself a great sinner, when he wrote his Confessions. For he describes himself as the worst of all the sinner in his life, which can surely be believed.
