'Federer-Nadal' can be big step for Barcelona Tour Andy Murray may have had a torrid couple of weeks at the French Open, but it was a much needed victory over Denis Istomin that was a major turning point in the British No 1's career. Things looked grim after he had lost to an inspired Wawrinka at the Monte Carlo Masters and suffered the subsequent delirium of a broken string, but Murray's mental resilience has proved the difference for him throughout the season. The 23-year-old has been a revelation on the surface in Paris. In the past he has struggled with the sluggish surface and therefore it was little surprise when he lost his first match, but with less time to chase his shots against Istomin, Murray found himself wobbling on his feet at the crucial stage in the match. The tension paid dividends for the 27th-ranked Austrian though as he was too strong in the final stages, taking the match at three sets all. What was pleasing for Murray's camp was that he was not beaten by sheer force of opponent, instead he was able to recover from two break points to take the first set 7-5. His only real chance in the second set was when he was given a game to love at the start of the

In order to examine the effect of the extract on learning and memory, the Y-maze test was used. The memory of old mice administered with 30 or 60 mg kg(-1) of the extract was decreased in a dose-dependent manner as compared with the saline group. In the case of young mice, the administration of 30 mg kg(-1) of the extract was accompanied by a decrease in the percentage of alternation behaviour. In old mice, a decrease in the percentage of alternation behaviour was also found at the above dose. The levels of cholinergic neurotransmitters in the brains of old mice were significantly lower than those of young mice. In addition, old mice showed an increase in the level of acetylcholinesterase (ACHE) and a decrease in the level of butyrylcholinesterase (BuChE). However, the treatment of 30 or 60 mg kg(-1) of the extract for 21 days did not increase the levels of the above cholinergic neurotransmitters, AChE or BuChE in the brains of old mice. In addition, 30 or 60 mg kg(-1) of the extract for 21 days did not affect the locomotor activity of old mice. The administration of 30 or 60 mg kg(-1) of the extract for 21 days increased the plasma levels of aspartate aminotransferase (AST) and alanine aminotransferase (ALT) in old mice, but not in young mice. These results suggest that administration of St. John's wort induces hepatotoxicity in old mice. Therefore, the extract should be handled carefully in old patients.A CFTC investigation launched four years ago into Aruba Holdings Ltd., a world-renowned maker of wireless digital voice and data communications equipment, has been dormant for more than two years, with no action taken against the company in the intervening period, it was revealed Monday by the Commodity Futures Trading Occl13bf012
