HFZ Batch Installer is a small, yet fully customizable piece of application software aimed to provide a simple, yet powerful way to include post production work that offers functionality that would otherwise be available only with larger programs, by giving a user access to those tools through a simple to use and easy-to-use interface. Q: Angularstrap not working when called by templateUrl I am using Angularstrap in a angular 5 project. I have been able to get it working fine when the bootstrap script is embedded directly inside my index.html file. But I want to call it from a template and the $scope of the calling template. When I do that I end up with two different elements being generated - one where angularstrap is embedded inside the template and one where the script is embedded directly. When I check the rendered html I see that the first case produces everything that is inside the ng-template so I am able to see it. But when the second case is rendered I see that the bootstrap is not working and I only see the basic angular rendering of the ng-template. Here is the calling template: Here is the template for the component: Here is the myapp module:

```
import { NgModule } from '@angular/core'; import { CommonModule } from '@angular/common'; import { BrowserModule } from '@angular/platform-browser'; import { MyAppComponent } from './myapp.component'; @NgModule({ imports: [ CommonModule ], declarations: [ MyAppComponent ], exports: [ MyAppComponent ], providers: [], bootstrap: [
