And the news from game Zone: And about Tell Me News: Please, send us your tips in order to make this game awesome! Twitter:@ggg33ny Facebook: A: I just found out that I misread what Koopa said.

He isn't talking about the aliens, he is talking about the game War In Other Space (2016). So, the answer is: There are aliens in this universe. And they have great rockets that can destroy any solar system in just an instant. And they aren't the main antagonist of the game, they just live in space and maybe they have attacked the earth. So, the aliens are a side element that a player have to defeat. I'm sorry for misunderstanding the question. Q: Can a perforated hose, running through the roof and connected to solenoid valves in the ceiling, be a suitable method of carbon monoxide detection? Would a perforated hose running through the roof and attached to one of the air vents lead to a stream of carbon monoxide and alarm the occupants? The perforations in the hose would let sufficient air in for combustion in the engine or furnace. A: You might have a mild fire. You could use a carbon monoxide alarm connected to a carbon monoxide sensor. The sensor might be concealed in the ceiling, or it might be attached to the exhaust stack. You would need three things:

Air inlet hole, One way valve, Carbon monoxide sensor That would be my best way to do it, but I would be concerned about carbon monoxide gas seeping into the walls or possibly causing a fire. That would be a nuisance, but it could be relatively easily handled by a slight increase in exhaust flow rate. If I were just looking to detect a source of carbon monoxide, then I would not be concerned about fire. However, I would be very concerned about fire. . ~~~ cm2187 In any case, this is quite a victory for the extremists. ~~~ cannonedhamster You would never know it. The Egyptian army is a different order of magnitude than the Islamic State. Even if they fought for each other they would all be stabbed to

"We're very excited to be among the first of three international studios to participate in the first ever TRT World R&D Labs, a new format designed to bring to life the immersive and emotional stories that TRT World is known for." said Mohsen Hamshok, Director of Technology at TRT World. "This new format will be the first of many to come, and we're looking forward to joining the R&D Labs community to help create the future of storytelling and to further expand TRT World's award winning visual storytelling." Blackbox features an original soundtrack composed by Suhas Birjee. It uses scenes from Afghanistan and Syria, to bring the audience closer to the realities and emotions of two extreme places. The soundtrack is designed to bring the viewers closer to the characters, using musics of another time to help bring the audience to a deeper and more personal level of immersion. Blackbox takes players on a journey that incorporates "real" audio and visual experiences that help bring the viewer further into the story. Players are tasked to revisit scenes and documents in order to bring a "lost" part of the story to light. Blackbox will launch as a downloadable title to the HTC Vive later this year. The first trailer will launch on the 18th of January on Twitch, YouTube, Facebook, and Twitter.

Q: prevent page from scrolling after modal dialog box closed I have a modal dialog box that is implemented using jQuery UI 1.10.0. Once the user clicks on the OK or Cancel buttons in the dialog box, the page does not scroll back up to the top of the page. If the user presses the Escape key or clicks outside of the dialog box, then the page scrolls back up to the top. Is there a way to prevent the page from scrolling back up after a user clicks on a button or closes a dialog box without using a hash in the url? A: There are a number of possible answers, the easiest is probably to add a class to the page like `dialog-open` and then add a listener to the body that checks for the class when it detects a click or mousedown event and then scrolls the window down if necessary. Of course, this is merely the easiest to implement. You could easily have a page navigation where you link to `#top` or the like when a certain dialog is open.

Q: I'm trying to dynamically add a textbox to my user control in VBA My User Control looks like this How do I add a textbox next to the current textbox if a button is pressed? I have tried something like: Private Sub CommandButton1_Click() TextBox1.Controls.Add Control:=TextBox1 TextBox1.Top = Me.Top TextBox1.Left = Me.Left End Sub However this doesn't seem to add any textboxes. A: TextBox1.Controls.Add control:=TextBox1 should be TextBox1.Controls.Add TextBox1 and this the simplest answer ever: Private Sub CommandButton1_Click() Me.Controls.Add Control:=TextBox1 Me.Controls.Add TextBox1 End Sub you are adding it twice, adding it in the first place, and double adding it in the second place. A: You should specify the Control Type. Private Sub CommandButton1_Click() Dim textBox1 As TextBox Set textBox1 = Me.Controls.Add(ControlType:=TextBox,...) textBox1.Top = Me.Top textBox1.Left = Me.Left End Sub
