What's new:

OF THE ROUND TABLE: The Name Game by by ITSLIKEADANCE The Knights of the Round Table are the most prominent of the Knights with the Grail, along with the Holy Grail the most famous of which is The Holy Lance. The tale of the Holy Lance, while still well known, did not arise until later. The Knights of the Round Table are considered closer relations to the Knights of the Round than any other order, and they are the order of the Round Table. The Knights of the Round Table existed for hundreds of years before anything like a history of the Grail could be understood. Before the temple to the Round Table called the White Temple was destroyed in 1400, when the Templars were arrested, all of their records had been destroyed. The Knights of the Round Table did have a history before the White Temple was destroyed in 1400. They first appeared at the time of the Crusades in 1095, when there was a band of 300 knights from the

Kingdom of Aragon serving under the King of France. These knights were called the Aragonian Knights and they went east to fight off the Turks. These Aragonians also travelled to the Near East by sea, where they fought the Ishmaelite Arabs in the two great battles of El Golson (1097) and Ain Jalut (1099). At the battle of Ain Jalut, the Knights were well outnumbered by the Muslims, and the Templars were forced to surrender. However, later that year, they secretly retreated west across the sea with their ships to go back to Aragon. However, they mysteriously disappeared. The Knights didn't reappear until 1099, when they heard of the murder of the Sultan of Jerusalem in Ashkelon. They retrieved the weapons of the murdered sultan, and the rescued the holy city and the nearby village of Maqqara from the Muslims in 1099 and they are officially called the Knights of the Round Table. They defeated the Muslims three times before eventually withdrawing from the Near East. They also defeated the Muslims again when they returned to the Near East in 1118. They suffered many losses in the battle. Many knights on the Muslim side were captured. The Temple of the Round Table was built in 1123 on the site where the Knights of the Round Table began their battle with the Muslims. They set up the round table on which they were to meet and sit at the next truce to pray for the victory. They meet annually at
