The War of the Chosen is now over. Following a year of devastating battles in the Levant, France, Iberia, Germany and Flanders, The Our Dear Kingdom has emerged victorious. Imperial cities have been conquered, our enemy lay in bloody heaps across the battlefield and our troops retreat into our newly founded homeland. Yet this is only the beginning. Across the seas, our former enemy have united as one, plotting to destroy our seat of power and ruling the world under the banner of one god, the New Empire. Gaius Cotta stands alone to fight this new enemy. As commander of our last remaining army, it is up to him to bring this war to a peaceful conclusion. Steel Division: Normandy '44 is an unforgiving real-time strategy game set in Europe during World War II. You take the role of a commanding General at the decisive Battle of Normandy. In this turn based game, both sides will engage in epic combat across 16 units, digging in to defend their positions and halting the enemy's advance. Some battles last as long as a week, making this a game you have to think carefully about how you play. One wrong turn, and your forces could be destroyed – or you could draw them into a perfect attack on the enemy's back. Master this gameplay and be a true General. Set out to conquer the longest border of any real-time strategy game to date, and crush your enemies under your feet! Key Features Every player controls the entire campaign from start to finish. Each game represents a week in the campaign. Fully featured campaign system. Campaign editor to create your own scenarios. Permanent unit upgrades. Dynamic events Endless replayability PALISADESTRATION2.0.0 PALISADESTRATION2.0 is coming to Steam! Planescape: Torment is an isometric, fixed-camera, interactive-narrative-experience which tells the intertwined tales of four uniquely-colored mages. You are a member of the legendary Order of the Stick, a group of, frankly, morons, who find your lack of intellect liberating and your wanton impulsivity invigorating. Playing as either Alarak, a half-mad ex-Scientist, or Delvan, a conflicted rogue artist, your character will embark on a wide variety of fun and unusual quests. About the Enhanced Edition: The Enhanced Edition of Planescape: Torment features major enhancements to both the graphics and audio, in addition to numerous new inventory items and a number of small, but notable, gameplay enhancements. It was developed for Windows, Mac OS X, and Linux and features the Enhanced Edition of the game's official soundtracks. Please refer to the accompanying box for system requirements. Key Features: * Enhanced graphics and sound, with updated character models, new backgrounds, and improved environments * Artwork overhaul by Michelle McParland with additional work by Wayne England and Gary Spear * Soundtrack overhaul with most new scores and many original pieces added to the official soundtrack * Numerous new inventory items, including the Epoch Blade, the Unicorn's Horn, the Pterads, and more * Continued compatibility with the Official Planescape: Torment Soundtrack CD, allowing playback of existing in-game music, new music, and music from the Enhanced Edition * New Dark Lair location * Updated translations for English and French * Additional game options, including new keyboard controls, a new multiline text input system, and many other gameplay and graphics options System Requirements Windows 1 GHz Processor 64 MB RAM 512 MB VRAM Windows XP SP3, Windows Vista SP2, Windows 7 SP1, or Windows 8 (1 GB or greater) Mac OS X Mac OS X 10.6 "Snow Leopard" or higher Mac OS X 10.6 "Snow Leopard" or higher See the Requirements List page for specific Mac OS X requirements. Wand April 26, 2014 You've said it. It's clear your product ideas deserve attention. You're passionate. You are committed. And you have the idea to combine technical excellence with creative genius to create a product that will change your life, the world, and possibly the universe. That's why it's so difficult for your work to find traction. They don't see your vision. They don't recognize the brilliance of your creation. If they do, they're quiet, busy people. They don't play in the same sandbox with you. They don't give your pitch half a chance. So how do you turn a vision into a reality? How do you create a market for your idea? How do you convince people to buy it? That's where the trouble begins. If you can't answer those questions, then your ideas will constantly revolve around emailing a business that is not interested. But it doesn't have to be that way. Here are four ways to create a community of advocates, leading to a thriving, profitable business. #1. Research Your Audience Who do they already love? Who do they want to love? Who are the thought-leaders in your space? Just because your product or service is critically important, that doesn't mean it has to be new or different. Potential customers, like consumers, have a tendency to equate innovation with new. When potential customers are seeking out information about your service, or if they're using it, they are almost always consuming. The products and services they've already used are always on their minds and heavily weighing their decisions in one of two ways: They value what other people believe to be important. This is referred to as "peer pressure" or "social proof". They want to try new technology. The best way to do this is not with a brand new product, but with a renewed version. What does that mean? If you're curious how relevant your product or service is to your target customer, start by asking yourself a question. When someone is searching for information online, she is usually looking for the answer to an important question. When a customer is researching your product, ask yourself

Space is so vast and empty that you can find your way around with just a compass. But when you look at the sky, you know it's not all black - there's light... everywhere. If you want, you can tune in to the frequencies of space and see the planets, stars, satellites and other celestial bodies drifting around in their orbits. Even the furthest and fastest ones are within sight. Then of course there are the other things in space... like fighter ships, space stations, space stations and space stations. And before you go and navigate, you'll need to hit the ground running as you lay a token on the ground before you, a spot on the ground you can build your base upon. Space is vast, but you won't have the time to explore it alone. You will need to build a space station or a space station. And it'll be up to you to decide which direction you'll travel to reach your goal. Even when you're all by yourself, you can make your space exploration as easy as a little spaceship can go. Pick your destination and get ready to choose the right maneuver to get the right direction. It's all in the orbit, orbit, orbit... you know, the on-board computer, the Navigator knows, you know... it's a trip you won't want to miss! Explore as many star systems as you like. Each system has a starting position and an ending position. When you reach the end position, you'll find a space station with a star system token and you'll also find a token for each regular planet in the system. Each token offers different attack and defense bonuses and when you build a base, you'll be able to use them to control your ship's abilities and you'll be able to assign one of your tokens to each space station in a system. This token pack includes a total of 153 tokens: 8 ship designs, consisting of 48 tokens3 cargo ship designs, consisting of 18 tokens2 types of shuttles, consisting of 18 tokens2 types of shuttles, consisting of 18 tokens2 types of shuttles, consisting of 18 tokens2 types of shuttles, for 12 more tokensA small fighter, for when you're flying in a ship soloA space station for when you need to hit a large installationAs a bonus, this pack includes 4 different missile and torpedo tokens for when those weapons have yet to hit their target.
