for mildly symptomatic prostate cancer patients. In the TSK-020 protocol, patients who are biopsy negative for prostate cancer receive active surveillance for > or = 5 years. However, few studies have discussed the optimal duration of active surveillance in this setting. Therefore, we report the long-term results of the TSK-020 protocol. Between October 1994 and April 2004, 1,561 patients with prostate cancer underwent transperineal systematic biopsy. Of these, 934 patients were selected for active surveillance on the basis of the TSK-020 protocol. Patients who fulfilled the criteria were assigned to either an active surveillance (1) or observation group (2). Of the 934 patients, 103 (11%) were assigned to the observation group. Of the 934 patients, 63 (7%) were ca3bfb1094
