The Grand Tour's £300 million budget is just one of the reasons it's succeeded in its quest to top the TV ratings (it's the highest-rated factual show on BBC One and BBC Two in the 25-54 age bracket). It has also been described as more 'upmarket' and 'sophisticated' than past reincarnations of the presenters' show, which has traditionally been marketed to a younger audience. Likewise, its move from the BBC's London headquarters to America's Sunset

Boulevard has allowed it to make a bigger, louder impression on audiences. It has also invested heavily in new filmmaking equipment, on top of hiring former Top Gear camera operator Guy Martin to shoot all of its cars and locations. It's also had the biggest budget of all, featuring all new production costs, with Piers Morgan – the only former Top Gear presenter not to return – and presenter Richard Hammond, as well as a multi-million dollar budget for the show. Like its predecessor, The Grand Tour also has a political agenda, using its gigantic budget to highlight the environmental impact of motoring in a bid to save the planet, as well as promoting electric and hybrid vehicles as a way to future-proof Britain's vehicle fleet. Other shows that increased their Success Stories I used to be a non-smoker, and I always had a bit of a sex drive, but I never found the courage to go out and ask a woman to do things. I was frustrated, self-loathing and miserable. I thought I was the only person to have these issues. My doctor put me on Viagra and told me to join a support group. Viagra worked... I saw a counselor and heard some practical, healthy advice. The support group was the best decision of my life. I don't think I would have ever had the strength, confidence, or courage to ask a woman for help. I was even in a bad car accident, in which I suffered a broken back. I couldn't move. I stayed in bed for two weeks. During my second stay, I even had a date! This happened because I was so lonely and depressed, and I made it a goal to get out of the bed and have something to look forward to. After my second date, I decided to try Viagra, and it worked! Now, I am married to a wonderful woman, and we can have great sex like we always wanted.
