* Create a new layer *. To create a new layer, choose Layers from the New Layer menu, shown in Figure 4-4, or press Ctrl+Shift+N. (You have to hold down the Ctrl or Shift key and press the N key to access the New Layer dialog box.) With the new layer selected, press B to open the Brush tool, then choose a brush type from the Brush panel, shown in Figure 4-4. Figure 4-4. You can access the various tools on the Tools menu by pressing the F key. The Brush tool is located on the Tools panel along with the Channels, Draw, and Lasso tools. In Figure 4-4, you can see that the choices for the brush, which is selected, include the following: _Mask_ A special brush that uses a mask to allow you to paint on a specific part of the image without affecting other portions. The Brush tool can create or select a mask. _Pattern_ Allows you to create patterns using the patterns palette. _Fill_ Allows you to fill an area with a solid color. (The Brush tool can also generate a painting pattern, but it isn't the same as a Pattern brush.) _Hard_ Changes the dynamic range of the image. _Soft_ Relaxes the dynamic range of the image so that it looks more like a photograph. _Blur_ Creates a soft blur to make the subject of the image look hazy, as if it were taken with a long lens. _Sharpen_ Creates a harsh, clear image. _Mask_ Uses a mask to allow you to paint on a specific part of the image without affecting other portions. _Smudge_ Marks out, or smudges, the image. _Cross_ Erases an area. _Eraser_ Allows you to erase the parts of the image you don't want. Figure 4-5. These brush tips provide information about the color range available with the tool.

Adobe Photoshop for Mac has been upgraded to version 10.0.1 for macOS High Sierra. It features 15 new features and improvements to enhance your productivity. It also contains a handful of minor updates and bug fixes for improved performance and stability. The company has also introduced a new feature which allows to quickly preview the final rendered image, if you didn't get the correct settings. We will show you the new features in Photoshop for macOS. Get Creative with Create a 'Startup' Template A new user interface for startup creation has been introduced in Photoshop for macOS. It allows you to quickly generate the launch screen in the "Startup Manager." Startup Manager helps you to create a unique homepage for your startup. As you can see in the screen shot below, all you need to do is to drag and drop the app icon into the box. The startup screen can be customized with your own app icon and additional information. You can also include your logo, create a different background image, and choose between light or dark theme. Of course, you can add more elements such as a search box or icons. Developers, designers, and developers have probably been using a "startup" type screen since the beginning of computers. It allows you to share your startup with your family, friends, and so on. Adobe Photoshop for macOS helps you create these kind of startup templates. Snap Layers Vertically You can now snap layers vertically, which is a feature that you can find in the Basic and Standard preferences. Basically, in this preference, you can scroll the Snap to Layers button to the right and you can click on it to enable or disable the snapping feature. You can also set the default snapping mode. The default mode is "Lock When Snapped," while the other possible options are "Lock When Snapped (Ignore Unlocked)" or "Unlock and Lock

When Snapped.” Of course, you also have an option to change the default snapping mode. For example, if you want to use “Unlock and Lock When Snapped,” the “Active Layer” will be your new default value for the snapping mode. In addition, the Snap to Layers button will appear on the Layers panel if you enable it in the Snap to Layers preferences. Return to the Previous State and Undo Changes a681f4349e

Protecting Children from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse Parents Should be Aware of the Signs of Sexual Abuse Research shows that 33% of children in grades 7-12 are at risk of sexual abuse, and that less than a third of children who are victims of sexual abuse actually report the incident. As a parent or guardian, you have a duty to protect your child from sexual exploitation and abuse. The ability to recognize the early signs of sexual abuse of your child and report it gives the child the best opportunity for assistance before any further abuse occurs. Education and prevention programs that promote the early detection of child sexual exploitation and abuse are available in many areas. The National Sexual Assault Hotline is 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, to assist you in the best way possible. Sexual assaults against children are taking place across the country. The hotline is available to assist you in any way, either by talking to you about what to do as a parent, or by connecting you with support groups for yourself or for your child. Call the National Sexual Assault Hotline at 800-656-HOPE (4673). Sexual Abuse Prevention and Education SAPE is a resource for all levels of education and government-related agencies. This web site provides information about sexual abuse in a variety of languages, along with links to other important information. The “most awkward” ballboy seated between the Colorado Rockies and Kansas City Royals at Kauffman Stadium last night was not voluntarily on the field, it turns out. “He was kidnapped and forced to be the pitcher’s teammate,” a security guard told The Athletic. The security guard, who works for the Kansas City Metropolitan Police Department, made the announcement during the seventh inning of last night’s game, the Royals’ 6-0 loss to the Rockies. They were playing the 10th inning last night because of the threat of lightning during the game. The Royals are investigating the incident and trying to determine the identity of the “kidnapped” minor-league ball boy, according to the news website. The security guard said he was not acting on behalf of the Royals or the Major League Baseball when he made the announcement, but he was a relief pitcher for the team’s AAA affiliate earlier in the week, and wanted to alert anyone who was in the vicinity that a minor-league ball boy had been kidnapped. The security guard said he did not

Former CBS correspondent Andrew Sullivan says he has a message for conservative activists: your party and the country need you. “I’ve learned a lot from reading what you write,” Mr. Sullivan wrote to fellow conservatives on Monday. “It’s sad you don’t hear that more often.” Speaking on MSNBC’s “The Cycle,” Mr. Sullivan said that he felt a responsibility to make his recent conversion, which ended his two-decade career in the mainstream media, more public. “I’m gay and I’m a Republican now. I’ve been in the closet for 15 years. Now I’m straight, I’m free and I’m a Republican,” he told host Rachel Maddow. “A lot of people out there are reading your essays and going, ‘Wow, we can’t do that.’” Mr. Sullivan said that he didn’t want to be the “voice of a partisan” and expected to step in as a more independent conservative voice in the media. “A lot of the reason I got to the point where I was was reading gay blogs, writing gay essays, and reading conservative blogs. And that’s when I realized that there is a void there and that it would be important to clear that one,” he said. Mr. Sullivan said that he didn’t feel the need to share his political views publicly since he stopped working for a major news company, but that he did feel that it was important to his future. “People can believe anything they want,” Mr. Sullivan wrote. “I know for sure that America was born as a middle-class, small-town country. That has changed. That’s the truth,” he added. Sign up for Daily Newsletters Manage Newsletters Copyright © 2020 The Washington Times, LLC. Click here for reprint permission. Jacksonville Beach Wedding Photographer It can be a good idea to dream up cool seating arrangements that you feel are going to make your wedding pictures look really unique. These two were very dramatic as they had their DJ all set up in a huge diamond shaped soft purple plastic sand box! And they had some more playful images because the chair’s were on the end of the
