So far I've been adding it to the main vb file as an option such as : Public Sub Load() LoadMacroFor:="Hello", RadioButton:=tbHello End Sub and then I have a separate class file which creates the macro, calls it and saves it Private Sub HideHello() MsgBox("Hello1") End Sub Private Sub TestHello() Call LoadMacroFor End Sub Private Sub UserForm_Initialize() Call LoadMacroFor End Sub Thanks A: The best practice is to place your plugin code in a module of your own that you load and use as you would any other module. Usually, you'd then place the procedure in which to execute the custom macro in a separate module. That way, it's a single, clear module that you load and use rather than having to load an application module. Here's a brief example: Sub PluginExample() Dim pluginModule As Module Set pluginModule = LoadModule("C:\path\to\your\plugin") pluginModule.procedureName() End Sub As another option, depending on your needs and programming skills, you could use the Imports or ImportsXml() trick to autoloading your module at run time. If you're using Imports, you can simply drag the module from the File Navigator to the Module window, select Load Imports from the menu, or use the LoadImports command. If you're using ImportsXml(), you'd first write the LoadImportsXml() subroutine, which would perform the same action. After that, you'd save a default plugin.xml file in your module's base
