I Have The Following Problem: I would like to create a index.html file that would redirect the user to the corresponding page of the html file. for example I have this html file: This Is My Title Another Title At the moment the user is redirected to index.html page and must click the 'www.w3schools.com' link. And this is the link that I would like to redirect to the corresponding html page: www.w3schools.com Please any one help me. I am really stuck with it. Thanks. A: You could add a click event to the images and in that event call one of the following: location.href = ""; window.location.href = ""; Make sure you change the tag to img: Writer and editor for small business clients. Former marketing and advertising copywriter with an MBA. Sunday, February 23, 2015 Will Your Brand Be Stolen? Ask any business owner what they find themselves most afraid of and there's a good chance that they'll tell you losing their brand. Think about it. Your brand is the identity that you give to your business. You spent time crafting it and constantly spending money to promote it. Even if you followed best practices and made sure your brand was correct, there's always a chance that someone will copy your brand and incorporate it into their own business. Here are a few ways to prepare your brand for theft: Know your differences. Most people will look at a logo and see a logo. It's more common than you may think. Do you know who developed your brand? Who owns the copyright? Are you the only people who have the rights to use the name

A: I found the answer. Basically, you can get the answer from the site here and also the keys are provided here No need to download other files, I have tested it. Melissa J. Carlson, PhD, RN, FAAN, FAANP Dr. Carlson is a Professor and Associate Dean for the School of Nursing, University of Illinois at Chicago and Director of the University of Illinois College of Nursing's Patient Safety Center of Nursing Excellence. She is an expert in the areas of patient safety and quality of care. She is the co-author of "Surgical Safety: A Primer for Nurses" and co-author of "Medical Practice and Patient Safety: A Primer for Nurses." She is a past-president of the National Database for Nursing Quality Indicators and serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Patient Safety. Dr. Carlson has published more than 100 scientific articles and chapters in professional journals, including the Journal of Patient Safety, Nursing Research, the Journal of Health Care Quality, and The Joint Commission Journal. She has lectured across the U.S. and internationally, including Brazil and India, and is the recipient of the National Quality Forum's Barry Oshatz Award, the highest honor awarded to a quality improvement professional. Over the past two decades, she has received numerous grants to support her scholarly research. She has developed two programs that have been sponsored by the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ): The University of Illinois at Chicago College of Nursing established a program to enhance the teaching of evidence-based care and the development of practice through the implementation of the evidence-based nursing curriculum. This program received a five-year, $3.45 million grant from AHRQ in 2008. The training has produced 17 instructors, who have taught more than 500 students across four training sites. The Institute for Healthcare Improvement's Evidence-Based Nursing (EBN) Programs support the implementation of evidence-based clinical practice guidelines and the promotion of integrated evidence-based practice. The Patient Safety Academy is one of the first such programs. Led by Dr. Carlson, the Academy has trained more than 700 preceptors, RN instructors, and other team members. Research Interests Dr. Carlson's work has focused on improving the quality of nursing practice. She is the author or co-author of several widely used textbooks, including: How to Enhance the Quality of Nursing Care: A
