Winkler, N.L. (2007). As the availability of computers has increased so has that of interpreters to assist in the perception of computer-based models and designs. Although the greatest number of interpreters are still used in the industry, commercial applications are also beginning to become available. This paper introduces a novel approach to interpreting computer-based information for the user and explores the benefits associated with its adoption. Ocelot software is proud to announce version 7.2.0 of its data visualization application Ocelot Data Visualization (ODV). This is the first major release of ODV in almost two years and showcases the continued advances in Ocelot's data visualization capabilities. In this project oriented tutorial, I will demonstrate how to build a free web-based geospatial time-series data viewer as a web map application based on Java, JavaScript, jQuery and Mapbox. This sample project includes both client and server code.
