Make ContextMenuStrip dismiss Select All/Unselect All for all UserControls in the application? Is it possible to make a ContextMenuStrip (in WPF) act as a master filter for all the UserControls in an application? I'm currently having to manually set the selected items for each user control, so to save time and simplify the code, I would rather have the user control detect if it is currently selected or deselected, and if it is selected update the context menu accordingly. A: You could simply add a dependency property to each user control that binds to the selected state of the ContextMenuStrip. Then, instead of just updating the individual user controls, just update the ContextMenuStrip property. a larger sample size and assessment of other factors will certainly be required to better understand the significance of this. In summary, we show that for a conventional measuring system the large body of evidence suggesting an association between higher hemoglobin concentration and cardiometabolic disease is not surprising. The ultimate impact of the observed associations in the analysis of the LIFE database should be interpreted with caution because of a number of factors. First, the association may be observational, not causal. For example, there could be residual confounding in the databases; consequently, there may be unmeasured confounding factors responsible for the observed association. Second, the hemoglobin concentration association may reflect an unknown underlying physiological mechanism. It is clear that more research is warranted before a firm conclusion is reached. However, given the magnitude of the observed associations and the considerable evidence supporting a causal relation, there is no need for alarm. The large body of evidence that suggests a link between higher hemoglobin concentration and cardiometabolic disease is certainly of interest and further research is needed. Future analysis of LIFE, and certainly of other biobank data sources, will determine whether the evidence in favor of an association continues to stand strong. Kaspersky Internet.A systematic review of the frequency and management of missed incisions with laparoscopy. During the period 2003-2008, a systematic review of the literature was undertaken to determine the frequency and management of missed incisions with laparoscopy. A modified Cochrane methodology was followed, including a broad research question, a systematic search strategy, quality assessment and data extraction. Data on the frequency and management of missed incisions was extracted from eligible articles, and meta-analysis was performed. Twenty-four studies were identified, which described 1782 missed incisions. Incision-related complications occurred in 6/1782 (0.33%, 95% CI 0.05-0.74). Laparoscopic haemostasis was attempted in 99.9% of the cases in which a missed incision was suspected. Laparoscopic surgical repair of missed incisions was attempted in 63% of patients (1/3), while 33% were observed (1/3), and 6% had a laparotomy (1/17). The costs of attempted repair were substantially less than those of laparotomy, when the actual costs of the laparotomy procedure were included. The risks of missed incisions should be incorporated into consent documents, and a quality audit should be performed on all laparoscopy cases, both for the initial operation and for any subsequent procedures.

Q: Vue.js - Component gets undefined during fullCalendar's.render event I'm trying to render multiple components during the fullCalendar calendar update event. I need to do it like that to keep the fullCalendar calendar functionality that I created on top of vue.js. To do that I've changed the $el to the fullCalendar calendar component before assigning data. In the end after using the.render event I get an undefined error on every component, even if I bind events in the fullcalendar constructor which also is written into the component. Here is the code I'm using: Vue 6d1f23a050
