One class of methods is known as 'waterjet' modeling. A waterjet modeling machine, or an array of machines, is used to form the surface of the 3D model by using a series of high pressure waterjetting nozzles. Each nozzle is controllable to controllably direct a jet of water to a desired location. The surface of the 3D model is formed by slowly scanning the nozzles, and the model is built up layer by layer. There are a number of problems with this modeling method. First of all, the modeling process can take a long time, and is tedious to perform. Further, waterjet modeling can damage the integrity of the 3D model and render it unusable. Also, waterjet modeling can be expensive, as waterjet modeling machines can be very large and expensive. Further, as the 3D model is built up layer by layer, the integrity of the model is irreversibly damaged at each layer. Thus, a need exists for an improved method for 3D modeling. washes (no longer than 10 minutes) on an ultrasonic processor.
