.fv example: projectname_1 projectname_2 ... projectname_N I would really appreciate if someone can help me with this. I am quite sure that in the future I will get the same error message with a different header file. This is just the first error but I was hoping that I could just switch out the headerfile to a standard one instead of writing them all out by hand. A: First off - file headers are human written files. If you remove any of them, or have two in the same directory your program might work fine until you deploy it. If you have several headers in a directory you should use a class to include them //header.h #include "projectname_1.h" #include "projectname_2.h" ... #include "projectname_N.h" //header.cpp #include "projectname_1.h" #include "projectname_2.h" ... #include "projectname_N.h" Then you can use a constructor to make a list of headers (you can then leave the destructor empty.) //header.h #include "header.h" #include #include class Header{ public: Header(const char* fileName, const char* headerName, const char* messageFile); ~Header(void); std::vector get_headers(); // data, not need header std::string get_data(); private: std::vector files; std::string file; }; //header.cpp #include "header.h" #include #include Header::Header(const char* fileName, const char* headerName, const char* messageFile) { this->file = fileName; this->headerName = headerName; this->messageFile = messageFile; this->files. 6d1f23a050
