Softube X has a highly evolved reverb section, providing an amazing wide range of dynamic and modulated reverb effects. In addition to offering high-quality impulse responses for an incredible value, it has all the important features from the best-selling Convolution plugin in a reverb section. With the 19-band Decay EQ that produces a super-smooth response, it has a processing system that even a seasoned reverb aficionado can not find fault with. The process of capturing impulse responses from the original hardware product is familiar yet totally unique and different, without having to do the work yourself. It captures software-perfect impulse responses at a fraction of the price of professional products, even allowing you to use multiple impulse responses at once for unlimited flexibility. The Decay algorithm is actually mathematically derived, so that it can be used to replace either analog or digital impulse response sources, which gives you an endless range of possibilities. GlueAre you looking for something different from your regular reverb? This is the one for you! This plug-in makes great sounds, but it does it with a unique twist. Its a special one as well, with two unique algorithms. One is a delay algorithm that lets you vary delay time based on any one of the reverb frequencies. The other one is a dynamic effect that lets you change the dampening for each and every reverb frequency. Its a great combo for when you need to glue down a reverb and give it some control in the middle of a mix.
