multirun.com/fs2004fsd-piper-cheyenne-400-linux. I have been playing with FS2004 for about 2 years and have managed to get past most of the problems I was having by using the FSD, and then finally got into the FSD and I started to learn how to use it. But now I need to take on FS2002 and its not an easy task. I have been through about 6 different list of documents and the manual, and tried to understand all this configuration to no avail.

When I come across a problem, I usually look up the details, something about the FSD manual and people on the FS2004 forum seem to give great advice. A problem I have been having recently however is that, every time I start to load a scenario or map, it takes 15min to 30min to load the files. I have the same machine running Ghost Recon Alpha3 and other games and they load the files in about 2min. I have loaded the memory cards (1GB at a time) from 1GB to 4GB and the game still takes the same time to load (about 15min). I do not have a lot of memory, a 4GB gddr5 stick, but it was bought some months ago and I do have some more memory that I will plug in soon. Any ideas on what it could be? I have noticed another problem as well, that since I have updated to the new version of the FSD, its written to a folder on my C drive and it usually makes all the files on my system much slower.

Does anyone know about that? A few questions, do the docs and manuals include solutions and if there are problems with the FSD, how do I find them?

Thanks for your help, Danny.
