The present invention relates to a method and apparatus for image processing for pattern correction. More particularly, the invention relates to a pattern correction method and apparatus for pattern correction to make a good copy of a design pattern that does not depend on the position of a scanning-exposure apparatus when there is displacement of an original and a photosensitive material. Conventionally, in the field of semiconductor manufacturing, a design pattern formed on a photomask is generally transferred to a photosensitive material (hereinafter referred to as a "resist") through a step of exposure to light. In this case, a pattern of a circuit to be formed on a substrate is to be formed on a substrate. In general, a pattern of a photomask is transferred to a resist in a scanning exposure apparatus using a so-called step-and-scan method in which a wafer stage is moved and each step exposure is carried out. In recent years, in the pattern correction of the photomask, a transfer pattern obtained by transferring a pattern of a mask to a resist is exposed, and a pattern obtained by adjusting a parameter on the basis of the transfer pattern is repeatedly exposed and developed to be formed on the mask. This method is disclosed in, for example, Japanese Patent Laid-open No. Hei 4-119271. In this method, by repeating steps of transferring and exposing a pattern to be corrected to a photomask, a pattern correction is carried out on a mask. Bearing arms Bearing arms are years, with the trend toward small and lightweight electric appliances such as notebook personal computers and cellular phones, it has been required to reduce the size and thickness of the electric connectors used in these appliances. FIG. 21 shows a schematic view of a conventional small and thin electric connector disclosed, for example, in Japanese Patent Application Publication No.

2008-288958 (Patent Document 1).

As shown in FIG. 21, a small and thin electric connector 1 is composed of a plurality of terminal-mounting portions 2a, 2b, 2c, 2d that protrude upward in order from a bottom portion (not shown) of a housing 2; and a plurality of first connector housings 3a, 3b, 3c, 3d that are respectively mounted in the terminal-mounting portions 2a, 2b, 2c, 2d. The electric connector 1 is configured such that the terminal
