Because when I was a kid my mum took me to see the original, in the big cinema at my local town hall. It was just before Halloween, which is pretty much a superstitious time to see scary movies. However, what really freaked me out was that the credits were coming up and at that point I heard a massive crash and the lights turned on. There was an enormous hole in the ceiling of the cinema. I panicked. I started screaming for my mum and we all started running. We left the cinema and I remember going home terrified, worried that we would be chased by Mordorians and injured. The next day, I was overcome with guilt that I hadn't clocked the movie's credits. My mum found out what had happened and told me that the film had been about to start and there had been a fire alarm. The effect of different temperature and gamma-irradiation on the pyrogallol oxidation and the reaction system is studied. The results show that the pyrogallol oxidation decreases significantly with the increase of temperature and gamma-irradiation. The rate of pyrogallol oxidation is decreased from 98.6% to 35.8% under 1.0 kGy gamma-irradiation at 298 K, whereas the rate of the reaction system decreased from 91.8% to 20.5% under 1.0 kGy gamma-irradiation at 298 K. The result of the order of the reaction of pyrogallol to H₂O₂ at different temperatures shows that the reaction rate of the system increases with the increase of temperature, and the apparent activation energy of pyrogallol oxidation is decreased from 9.862 kJ/mol to 1.564 kJ/mol with the increase of temperature from 298 K to 318 K. The result of order of the reaction of pyrogallol to H₂O₂ with different gamma-irradiation at 298 K shows that the reaction rate increases with the increase of the irradiation dose, but the activation energy of the system remains unchanged. The thermal effect may be the main cause for the decrease of the pyrogallol oxidation.A new method of sympathetic nerve block
