LoginCode is a lightweight software application designed specifically for helping you save all your passwords into a database so you can log in to websites automatically. Data is encrypted with the aid of the AES-256 algorithm. Create a database The program gives you the possibility to generate a user-defined database where you can store passwords. A wizard-like assistant is employed for helping you set up the database. This approach comes in handy for less experienced users, as they offered step-by-step tips. You can password-protect the database for making sure other users cannot gain access to your confidential information. What's more, you are allowed to pick the saving directory, choose the preferred hashing and encryption algorithms, and select the items that you want to include in the database. Importing/exporting options You can import passwords from different web browsers, such as Internet Explorer, Firefox, Chrome, Safari, and Opera, and export the database to CSV file format. Passwords can also be copied to the clipboard so you can paste them to other utilities. Store multiple passwords The tool lets you organize your websites with the aid of custom folders. In addition, it shows information about each website, such as name, address and username, and lets you display items in the main panel using different view modes, such as large or small icons, tiles, or details. Websites can be sorted by name, usage, website address or username. Add new web login items You are allowed to manually add a new web login item by providing information about the name, website address, username and password. You can automatically log on to websites without user interaction and enter custom notes about each web login item. Extra tools and configuration settings LoginCode helps you perform searches throughout the entire database and create strong passwords with letters, digits and special characters, and a user-defined length. A few configuration settings help you launch the utility at Windows startup, automatically lock the database after a certain number of minutes, and maximize the web browser on login. An overall efficient password manager All in all, LoginCode provides a simple software solution for helping you store passwords in an encrypted database, and can be mastered by beginners and professionals alike.
