[Tuberculosis in Tunisia from 1982 to 1991]. The tuberculosis situation is being evaluated in Tunisia from 1982 to 1991. The average annual rate of newly confirmed cases has been 45 per 100,000 people, that of existing cases 46 per 100,000 people, and that of death due to TB 27 per 100,000 people. Data indicate that, as for western countries, the spread of TB is due mainly to M. tuberculosis strains. The proportion of multidrug-resistant cases is rising, particularly among patients hospitalised. Only 10% of cases have been bacteriologically confirmed. Sputum examination should be systematically undertaken in all suspected cases, particularly among immunocompromised patients. Successful treatment is based on the association of a rifampicin-containing regimen for six months. This combined regimen is proposed in all cases and in retreatment cases as soon as M. tuberculosis strains have been identified.

In Vivo Obtaining of the Human Auricular Cartilage with Stripper Flap for Laboratory Animals. Our aim was to investigate the application of stripper flap technique in the in vivo obtaining of human auricular cartilage for laboratory animals. Ten human cadaveric auricles, including 7 males and 3 females (mean age, 53.6 years), were used to collect the auricular cartilage for this study. We harvested the auricular cartilage from 7 of the 10 cadavers by an inch-long skin strip without undermining after observing the anatomic anatomy. The second, third, and fourth ear of the other 3 cadavers were used to demonstrate the advantage of the periosteal dissection technique. The auricular cartilage was obtained without undermining the perichondrium and periosteum. In 7 cases, the obtained cartilage could be used to repair the defective ear cartilage in the other 3 cadavers. The mean value of the harvested auricular cartilage was $4.0 \times 4.0 \times 2.6$ mm. The intact cartilage was obtained from the second, third, and fourth auricles for use in 4 cadavers. The mean time required for the dissection was 6.2 minutes. All patients were satisfied with the results. The stripper flap technique can be used to obtain the auricular cartilage from the human cadavers for laboratory animals. The cartilage is suitable for auricular reconstruction and should be considered for laboratory animal research.
