I remember reading that when you change an /8 to a /32 the remaining /8 gets split into /28 subnets. Is this correct? Does the /32 get split into /28 subnets? The reason I am asking this is because I'm trying to calculate how many IP addresses a router needs to have for its IP (subnet) table, assuming I need at least 24 addresses (IPv4). I have a /8 of 192.168.1.0/24 which in turn has a /28 of 255.255.255.0/24 meaning I need 16 addresses. However, if the remaining 192.168.1.0/25 space gets split into /28 subnets how many IP addresses does each subnet get? In this case, a /28 of 192.168.1.0/25 would equal /24 or 255.255.252.0/24, meaning I would only need 9 subnets. Is there anyone that has a good resource that explains this process? A: In the /24, there's a contiguous group of 224/24 (which is the remainder of 255.255.255.0) addresses starting at 192.168.1.0/24. When you change it to a /32, then the 224 addresses are split between two 192.168.1.0/28 subnets. Each subnet can have a different netmask (e.g., 192.168.1.0/25 has 255.255.255.0/24), as long as it's the same subnet. The same thing happens when you change an /16 to a /24: there's a contiguous group of 224/16 (the remainder of 255.255.255.240) addresses starting at 192.168.1.0/24. If you continue this process, you can change an /8 into a /25 and keep on splitting a /25 until you go to a full /32. A subnet is not required to be contiguous, but if you need something like /28 or /29, the addresses have to be completely within a
