I'm not sure if there is a standard way to do this. I know that a way to do this would be to somehow put the points on the circle so that I could do something like  $x^2 + y^2 = R^2$ . I can't seem to figure out how to do this but I have code that finds the distance between two points on a circle and I'm sure it is possible to find the distance between two points on a circle with a circle of radius R. Thank you, Ariel A: Looks like  $x^2 + y^2 = R^2 + c$  (i.e.  $x^2 + y^2 - R^2 = c$ ) is the right way. @Bruno...yeah...I figured it out. This is the equation for the circle. When we find the distance, we plug in  $x = x_1$  and  $y = y_1$  and solve for  $x^2 + y^2$  in terms of  $R^2$ . First, we performed a large number of in vitro experiments to identify the exact molecular signaling pathways involved in the process, including the ERK, p38, and
