I've got a server that will be fully local to my home computer (if you do not know of the "minimal" installation name, click here). I would like to set up a web server on this. This is on a Debian-based distribution, which means I should be able to install the LAMP package, configure Apache, and be done with it. Right? The issue I'm running into is that on a minimal install, the server is not installed. I installed the server (using apt-get) but I can't find the executable for it anywhere. It's not even on my $PATH. The errors that I get using sudo find ~ -name httpd (I'm using an SSH connection at the moment so that's the value of ~), are /var/www

`/var/run /var/lock /var/lib/apt` Is there any way to set up Apache on a minimal installation? A: Q:
