This powerful "replace" capability enables users to replace an object in an image, even when the camera doesn't capture the object in its original location, by leveraging content from other parts of the image to approximate when the missing object was originally captured. Content-Aware Fill also enables users to automatically fill in missing objects by using an algorithm within Photoshop (AI) to determine the missing object's placement based on the rest of the image, and automatically choose a version of the object that is most similar to the other portions of the existing image.
